2. “Joyce Kozloff: Girlhood” at DC Moore Gallery

Following her parents’ deaths, Joyce Kozloff faced the task of clearing out her childhood home. There, she rediscovered drawings she had done in grade school. Kozloff has incorporated these youthful pictures into her latest work, creating new pieces using childhood art supplies such as chalk, crayons, and craypas, and even attaching her own childhood dolls to the edges.

535 West 22nd Street, October 5–November 4, 2017; opening reception 6 p.m.–8 p.m.
