- Sweeping auras and boreal nights.*

- Carrie Moyer is making the hottest, most ambitious and optically ferocious abstract paintings of her life. Sensual passages of stains, drips, and what look like imprints made from available female bodies conjure a world of light, cloud-scapes, body interiors, sex up close, and diamond gasses. The spaces she creates are simultaneously deep, biological, psychological, and metaphysical. —Jerry Saltz

- DC Moore Gallery, 535 West 22nd Street, through March 22.*
